

James Sagar is a physicist by training. He completed his Ph.D. at the University of York before carrying out post doctoral research at University College London. Sagar joined Oxford Instruments in 2015 and has held several product management positions. Since 2019, he has lead product management for benchtop NMR with a particular focus on using NMR tools to solve specific real world challenges.